For the prevention and cure
BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended
HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS.

Extract from the Report of L. Baldwin, Esq. Principal Engineer to the Board of Public Works, for the state of Virginia.

—— The next important objects are, to shew the manner of construction and expence of a road, on the most improved modern plan.

In France and England, great attention has been bestowed upon this subject within a few years. The roads are mostly from 25 to 30 feet wide, and constructed with great care, with foot-paths, drains, &c. of the most convenient and permanent kind. In the neighborhood of great towns, they are made wider. The construction and form of the road are adapted to the nature of the soil, the character of the country, and the facility with which the materials can be furnished.

There seems to be three principal forms in Europe. Others, or modifications of these, are occasionally adopted. The first is a convex road, in which the transverse section presents a segment of a circle of large radius for the upper surface, with ditches and drains on each side.—This is most generally practised in England and France, and almost without exception in this country. The second is that in which the road is concave instead of convex; that is, a cross section of the road gives a curve line of large radius, drawn from a centre above the road for surface. In this form, the water is drained off along the middle to side drains, or over falls at convenient distances, and is preferable to that made convex, where there are small declivities and little water to collect on the road.—This form is sometimes used in paving streets in town. This is the form of the pavements in Paris; and some roads in France constructed in this way have been found very good—but I believe it has never been in use here. The third kind presents a straight line from one side to the other, in a transverse section, having a small slope to lead off the water to one side only. This is seldom adopted in level countries; but where the road lies along the side of hills or mountains, it is the best form that can be applied.

If the making a road and keeping it in repair, were considered merely on mechanical principles, we should easily conclude that a perfectly level line would be the best for the transverse surface, making all wheels wide and perfectly cylindrical to roll in parallel plains. But natural difficulties prevent the former, and use and inveterate habits render the latter hopeless. Rains, snow, &c. falling upon the road, increase the resistance, and would soon destroy it if not diverted. All wheel carriages are formed with narrow wheels, declining from the centre of gravity of the load, and pitched gathering, so as generally to throw up the soft substance in its track, and deposit it on the outside of the ruts. To avoid the inconveniences which the water produces, a concave, convex, or sloping form, has been adopted, by which the water may be drained off. But, as in moving along an inclined surface, the weight of a loaded waggon is not equally distributed on the four wheels, but is lessened on the higher and increased on the lower wheels, in proportion to the slope, by which ruts are more easily formed, the convexity or lateral inclination of the road ought to be the least possible. This convexity has been various; in general it is from 12 to 21 inches—that is, where the road is 30 feet wide, it is 12 or 21 inches higher in the middle than at the sides. For a road of that width, 12 inches is enough; and where it is to be made of hard and porous materials, even less would do. It is often observed, that notwithstanding the curvature in the surface of a new road, the carriage wheels soon wear out deep ruts, into which all the water collects—and instead of discharging itself in the sides, it runs along the rut with increasing violence, and forms dangerous ravines before it can escape by side drains. This evil can be prevented in a great measure by forming paved drains across the road, at 80 or 100 yards from each other in ascending hills.

The most durable and easy road for heavy traffic over an argillaceous or loamy soil, whatever the form and breadth may be, is made of stone and gravel.—The natural earth is raised above the surface of the adjoining land a few feet wider than the part to be travelled over. A channel is left or formed in the middle, 30 feet wide, if that is the intended width, in which are placed with care large stones well beaten close to each other over the whole width. Upon this is another bed of stones, broken to the size of 4 inches, well hammered and rammed in, so as to fill all the cavities between the under stratum of large stones. The third and last layer should be of coarse gravel, or stones broken to the size of hickory nuts, thrown on evenly and well rammed or rolled with a heavy iron roller. The first bed should be from 12 to 18 inches thick, the second 12 inches, and the last about 10 inches in the middle and 8 at the sides. But if the materials are too remote from the line of the contemplated work, and this mode of construction would be too expensive, the road should be in a more simple and economical way. The following manner of working may be pursued.

The earth should be thrown up 40 feet wide, about 14 inches above the adjoining land, which in most cases will be effected by digging the ditches on each side for drains. Upon this bed, a coating of gravel, or stones broken fine, should be evenly spread about one foot thick in the middle and 8 inches at the side of the cartway, which should be 30 feet wide—the convexity of the road to be 12 inches, and ditches to be formed every where along the sides, into which all the water should be admitted, to run off into the neighboring branches or creeks. None should be allowed to settle or remain in the drains, as this would keep the bed of the road soft and spongy by absorption. After the bed is made even, it should be well rolled with heavy iron rollers, and allowed to settle, before the gravel is laid on, which should be rolled also, and the road allowed to settle before it is used.

Wherever there is a long ascent or descent, there should be level places formed at intervals, where cattle may occasionally stop and rest in going up, so as not to remain in draught, and the carriage stand on a plane surface. For want of these stopping places, we often see waggoners blocking their wheels with stones or billets of wood, to relieve their horses and let them breathe. In long hills this is done five or six times. The consequence is, horses often become restive from having to set off in full draught, and lose their spirits and strength under the inhuman cruelty inflicted with the whip. These resting places give encouragement to the team, and they move off for a few yards on a level and ascend the next angle with readiness and refreshed strength. Such places should be a few yards long, and from 80 to 150 yards from each other where the ascent is steep.

Another advantage of these resting places is, it gives an opportunity of forming stone or paved gutters, where the water descending the hill may be turned off before it has run far enough to wash out deep ruts, which are great evils in roads over hills, nay often become channels for violent currents, where the treading of horses under heaving draughts, becomes uncertain and difficult, and throw almost all the weight on the wheels which happen to fall into them.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT AT WASHINGTON.

Tuesday, February 3, 1818.

GENERAL ST. CLAIR.

The House of Representatives, in a committee of the whole, yesterday took into consideration the bill for liquidating the claims of major general Arthur St. Clair. The bill provides that 5,000 dollars shall be paid to the general; but general Harrison moved to amend it by commuting that gross sum for an annual pension of 1,000 dollars. This gave rise to a debate in which general St. Clair, his services and his merits were discussed. A diversity of opinions prevailed respecting the validity of his claims which were made to bear a variety of complexions, according to the feelings and opinions of different members; and it was painful to perceive the firmness, with which sentiments were persevered in by some few in direct contradiction to the avowed opinions of others, on as manifest truths as ever met the concurrence of wisdom and sound judgment;—and yet on neither side was there a deficiency of talent or integrity. The facts, as nearly as we could collect them, are these: General St. Clair at an early stage of the revolutionary war, having then a respectable property, embarked himself and it in the cause of America, and at a moment when that cause was languishing for want of men and money, sold his land, and advanced out of the proceeds arising from it, for the use of government, to an officer of the United States of the name of Butler a very considerable sum of money to enable him to enlist men. The cause, not the money, being uppermost in his thoughts, he did not think of taking vouchers, or of demanding payment, for a long time, when the decay of his property compelled him to apply for it, and difficulties were then thrown in the way of his recovering it, by some deficiency in the accounts between Butler and the government. At length, in the year 1810, after years of attendance and solicitation on his part, congress passed an act allowing him a sum of 2,000 dollars, (his original loan was 1,800 lent 40 years ago) but upon the special condition of his renouncing all further claims upon them. From what passed yesterday in congress, it would seem that he had, in attending upon congress, incurred a large debt for his subsistence; for the payment of which he had no earthly means of providing, but the balance due to him by government, and that in order to save himself from a jail he was fain to accept the 2,000 dollars offered to him by congress for his debt. He, therefore, was considered by some as acting under what the law calls duresse; and much was yesterday said in defence and censure of that congress in the transaction, on the grounds that it had made use of the statute of limitation to bar such a claim, and had driven the unfortunate claimant, through the instrumentality of his distresses, to accept a sum of money much less than his debt.—The select committee who reported this bill, took up general St. Clair's claims upon the general ground that it was manifest he had advanced 1,800 dollars to government, and had never been paid; and on that account, as well as in consideration of his great age (86 years) and of his fidelity, services and worth, they voted him 5,000 dollars as a sum that would nearly cover that debt and the interest due upon it.

Mr. Ogle, the chairman of the committee, said that if government were to come to a fair account with general St. Clair, it would be found to owe him much more than 5000 dollars. Besides, something was due to him, who when the country was in danger and distress, gave his money and himself, without reserve, to its necessities, and was, after many years, put off with a compromise not very creditable to the congress that enforced it on him—and thus was the man who had rendered essential service to his country and who to the last day of Washington's life was held in his good opinion and respect, rewarded for his services.

Mr. Bassett moved to amend Mr. Harrison's amendment, by striking out 1000 and leaving a blank—but this was negatived.

Mr. Forsyth moved to amend the bill so as to direct the claim to be settled by the war department.

Mr. Harrison withdrew his amendment.

Gen. Smith affirmed that the money was actually due to general St. Clair, and that neither the sum in the bill, nor the pension, would fairly remunerate him—and general Reed testified to nearly the same effect.

Mr. Clay rose to justify the congress of 1810, and said that the ground they went upon was that the general's claim was doubtful, and that the sum of 2000 dollars was granted as a compromise, on the expectation that it would put an end to his claim. Still, however, Mr. Clay said he was willing to vote a reasonable pension to him.

Mr. Whitman said he was in the congress of 1810, and differed totally with Mr. Clay, respecting the grounds of the grant.

Mr. Johnson of Kentucky said he was on the committee on that occasion, and, as well as he could recollect, the sum given to general St. Clair was not to cancel his claims, but to enable him to pay the expences incurred by his long attendance.

Mr. Sherwood, who was also in that congress, denied the accuracy of Mr. Clay's statement—while Mr. Southard, who was also in that congress, agreed with Mr. Clay.

Mr. Baldwin took up with earnestness the cause of the neglected veteran, which he pleaded with vigor and boldness, and, without talking of feeling, with much feeling also. He said that if Mr. Forsyth's amendment was adopted, the object of the bill's provisions would have died before the enquiry could be terminated. To send it to the war department would be trifling with the old gentleman's sorrows—to set up the act of limitation against his claims was dishonorable.—Had the debt been funded along with the other debts of the country, what a vast sum would it not have amounted to before this time! And was he who fought the country's battles with Wolfe and with Washington, to be rejected when making a demand of lent money, forty years due? Mr Baldwin said that he personally knew gen'l St. Clair's distresses—and he could inform the house that the general had lived on the Allegany mountains in a miserable hut till a female charitable society at New-York sent him 500 dolls. which enabled him to build a house to shelter him. Every one that knew St. Clair, knew that when in opulence he never cared for money—but when driven by want to ask for his own from the country to whom he had lent his property, he was answered that the act of limitation barred him. Was it conduct worthy of a legislature or of a republic to one of its founders and benefactors, to put him off with not half his right by a compulsory compromise?

Mr. Holmes made a pathetic appeal to the feelings of the house, of which we can give but a few words, as we heard it but by snatches. It was once happily said that the noblest object in the world was a brave man struggling with adversity. If Gen. St. Clair was that object how could they think of barring his claims by a statute of limitation? Was it not due to themselves to feel for, and protect him—who was he? An officer of high trust in the revolution, who never lost the confidence of Washington. He had been unfortunate, and that fate followed him into the last stage of his life. Why then ask whether he was entitled, or any other question but this—"Has he served his country?—If he has, said Mr. Holmes, I would ask him to eat of my bread and to drink from my cup." Mr. Holmes hoped the house would accept the report and act upon it—and that the 5000 dollars would be paid to the general so that he could carry it home and realize it to his family.

Mr. Sergeant made a most ingenious, argumentative and honorable speech upon the occasion—in which he disclaimed asking any thing for Gen. St. Clair but his right, and scorned the idea of appealing to any thing but the justice of his cause, which he maintained to be irresistible—Mr. Cobb too, on the same principle argued the case with great ability.

Mr. Hugh Nelson too, distinguished himself by a speech fraught with good sense, spirit and generosity of sentiment, in which he pronounced the treatment of General St. Clair, in respect to the statute of limitation and the act of 1810, to be disgraceful—such as he was convinced no gentleman in that house would for ever so much, observe towards another.

My time forbids my being more particular or going farther.

On motion of Mr. Johnson of Kentucky, the committee rose, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again.

On Monday last a petition was presented to the Senate of Pennsylvania from "William Cobbett, an Englishman, resident in the state of New-York, but now in Pennsylvania," praying the commonwealth to remit him the amount of a forfeited recognizance; payment of which he believes to have been illegally exacted by the late chief justice M'Kean. INTERESTING.

Extract from Bell's London Messenger.

Our relations with America have become so important, or at least in a progress of becoming so, that we shall defer our considerations of them to an opportunity when we can discuss them by themselves. Mr. Monroe is a man of great talent and activity, and his movements are not without an object. We think the point of difference will be the affairs of Spanish independence. We conceive that we feel as strongly as any one for the true glory of this country;—but it always has been our opinion, and we know it personally to be that of one of the greatest statesmen this country ever produced, that Halifax, Canada, &c. are not worth what they would eventually cost England; and that the true point of wisdom would be to make the best bargain we could for them to the United States. Go they must; and it is better to let them go, before another debt of eight hundred millions be added to this country."

From a London paper, Dec. 8.

In consequence of the proclamation forbidding British officers to serve in S. America, the Indian, Davidson, destined for St. Thomas, put to sea from Portsmouth, 29th ultimo, in such haste that 30 of the officers who had taken passage in her, and who had their luggage on board, were left behind. The Dawson, Dormer, also for St. Thomas, with officers, sailed in company.

The increase of the trade from Liverpool to India far exceeds the expectation of those persons who were most sanguine; upwards of thirty sail of ships from that port being now engaged in it.

Letter from Stockholm, Nov. 14.

A discharged officer, of a good family, of the name of Drake, has excited general indignation by a very wicked action.—Having been employed to superintend the workmen who were repairing the Riterholms Church, which is used only for the interment of the royal family, and of the Knights of the Seraphim, as well as to preserve the trophies of Swedish valor, he broke into what is called the Caroline vault, disturbed the ashes of our great king Charles X. and of a duchess of Holstein; took from the former the crown, sword hilt, and sceptre, and from the latter a diadem and necklace all of gold, and in part richly set, but has betrayed himself by his boasting. He has even had a waistcoat made out of the velvet on one of the coffins, and plundered many other monuments in the church. But as there was found in his pocket, when he was arrested, an exact list of the stolen articles, and an account of what had been done with them, the whole have been recovered.

The senses of the body correspond to certain powers or affections of the mind.

The sight corresponds to spiritual vision. A man says, "I see the truth of your remarks." "I plainly saw his design."

The hearing corresponds to obedience. We say to a child, "do you not hear me?" In the Scriptures the crime of not hearing, that is refusing to obey, is several times imputed to the children of Israel, and it is said of them that "hearing they hear not," that is they hear with the ears, but do not obey.

The smell corresponds to perception.—We say, "I smell a rat," that is, we have a perception of something which was before unknown to us, or obscure.

The touch corresponds to the feelings of the mind. We say, "a man was touched at hearing of the misfortunes of his neighbor." "He was touched with compassion." "His honor was touched," &c.

The taste corresponds to spiritual enjoyments. A man speaks "of tasting the joys of Heaven." It also corresponds to sound judgment—as when we say a man has a taste for poetry, for painting, and the like.

For Sale or Rent,

A FARM in Fairfax county, containing about 500 acres of land. It is situated within half a mile of the Little River Turnpike, distant 21 miles from Alexandria, and adjoining the very highly improved farm of Francis L. Lee, esq. One half of this land is in wood, and 50 acres of that which is open has been lately cleared. The plaster is in general use in this neighborhood, and the flourishing condition of all those farms upon which it has been employed, gives the most satisfactory evidence of its beneficial effects. THEATRE.

The Managers are under the disagreeable necessity of again claiming the public indulgence; but when the cause is known, they trust that without further preface it will plead their apology.

Mrs. Entwisle has been suddenly and seriously attacked with a violent indisposition; so much so as to prevent her appearance for some time. TIMOUR THE TARTAR will, however, without fail, be presented on Saturday next, and Mrs. Durang will, in the interim, prepare herself for the part of Zorilda. The temporary delay will be attended with this advantage, that several of the pieces of machinery which were not quite finished will be entirely ready, and the spectacle elicit a much greater degree of splendor and magnificence.

On SATURDAY EVENING, FEB. 7, (And no postponement on any account whatever)

Will be presented the grand spectacle of

TIMOUR the TARTAR,

WITH ENTIRE NEW SCENERY, MACHINERY, DRESSES AND DECORATIONS.

The scenery painted by Mr. Grain and assistants, the machinery by Messrs. Varden, Ashe and assistants.

Timour (Khan of the Afghan Tartars)	Mr. Caldwell
Agib (Prince of Mingrelia)	Mrs. Legg
Bermeddin	Mr. Carr
Abdalec	E. Emberton
Octar	Hayes
Kerim, 2 rival chieftains in love with Selima	Parker
Sanballat, 2 rival chieftains in love with Selima	Tatnell
Orasmin	Emberton
Oglou	Entwisle

Georgians, Tartars, Africans, &c.

Messrs. Wynne, Stewart, &c.
Zorilda (Princess of Mingrelia)	Mrs. Durang
Selima (in love with Kerim)	Monier
Liska	Miss Trajetta

A description of the most prominent scenery, &c.

Act 1. The interior of Timour's Fortress, with a BRIDGE in the back ground—on one side of the stage a TOWER in which Agib is confined. A MAGNIFICENT PROCESSION of the Tartars over the Bridge on HORSEBACK, conducting ZORILDA, who is mounted on a Courser richly caparisoned; the COURSER KNEELS and Zorilda dismounts.

Scene 3. A SPIRITED TOURNAMENT. Timour and Zorilda enter and seat themselves on thrones to witness the who at that moment enter the LISTS ON HORSEBACK. Kerim's Horse takes part in the combat, and drags Sanballat to the ground. Kerim dismounts and proposes to renew the combat on foot—the horses are led away and the fight begins. Kerim falls and loses his sword; his rival rushes to despatch him: at that instant, Kerim's Horse interposes to save his Master.

Sanballat in fury stabs the Horse,

Who falls and expires at his Master's feet.

Act 2. A splendid BRIDAL CHAMBER, belonging to Timour.

The Last Scene represents TIMOUR'S FORTRESS BY MOONLIGHT. A TREMENDOUS CATARACT & WATERFALL over which is an arched bridge. One side of the stage represents the EXTERIOR of TIMOUR'S FORTRESS. A variety of smaller Towers and Terraces appear in the perspective.

During this scene, the Georgians and Mingrelians engage the Tartars on horse and foot. Timour himself ON HORSEBACK appears and encourages his troops—he becomes personally engaged, and is dismounted—he is pursued and not having time to enter a PORTCULLIS leading to the interior of his castle, he climbs the battlements, and reaches in safety the TURRET'S TOP—he brings forth Zorilda and threatens to destroy her unless Agib, who has escaped to the Georgians, is restored to him—she breaks from him and runs to the bridge, from which she leaps into the water—Agib on horseback rushes after her.—The Georgians with a BATTERING-RAM make a breach in Timour's castle—ALL THE HORSES ENTER—At the conclusion of the General Engagement, Agib having recovered his mother, returns with her on horseback. TIMOUR IS OVERTHROWN, but Zorilda spares his life at the intercession of Agib and Oglou.

PRECEDING THE SPECTACLE,

Will be presented the celebrated comedy called

Laugh when you can.

I. Thompson, agent, joint proprietor," &c. and should any be offered for sale without said label on them the purchaser may be apprised that they are counterfeit.

James Kennedy & Son,

RESPECTFULLY inform the public that they have just received from LEE's MEDICINE STORE, No. 46, Maiden-lane, New-York, a fresh supply of the following valuable MEDICINES:

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges,

Which have within sixteen years past cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from WORMS, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or griping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known.

Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Teres or large round worm; the Ascarides or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitine or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tenia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; pains in the head and thighs and lowness of spirits; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Restorative Powder for the Teeth and Gums,

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly gratifying to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

If is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficatious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.
